

Coral Bott

Coral Bott is the 19-year-old daughter of Andy and Danielle Bott of Traverse City. She is a 2022 graduate of Kingsley Area High School and will be completing her sophomore year at Alpena Community College this fall. Then, she will be transferring to Ferris State University to complete her major in social work to pursue her dream of helping people in need. Coral spends most of her time studying and working. On her free time she spends it helping her parents out with the farm, or finding a craft to do such as cross stitching or crocheting.

Coral comes from a long line of cherry and livestock farmers. On one side of her family, her great grandparents and great uncles were all cherry farmers, some uncles are still farming to this day. Then on her other side, her great grandparents were livestock farmers. All of these generations of farming has been passed down to Coral's parents and herself, as they are continuing the tradition of farming. Coral wants to continue to be a part of and support the agricultural community. The farming community has taught Coral life lessons that has formed her into the woman she is today.
