The Importance of Christmas in the Park

The tradition of the Christmas in the Park display dates back to the 1950's and has become a staple in the South Bay.

In 2021 Christmas in the Park celebrated 42 years in downtown San Jose.

In 2020, the COVID-19 crisis facilitated the need to rethink the event. People wanted a sense of normalcy, tradition, and a means to celebrate the holidays and the drive-thru was born.

These events continues to build community year after year. From tree decorating to a traditional cup of hot chocolate and a churro, Christmas in the Park, and now Blinky's Illuminated Holiday, remain as constant holiday traditions.

Engage, Inspire, Connect.

There are so many ways to be part of Christmas in the Park and Blinky's Illuminated Holiday. It's the perfect opportunity to secure exposure and give back to San Jose during a special time of the year. We offer a range of options to fit any budget or goal. San Jose, California

Why we go: Tech companies and holiday cheer may not seem like the likeliest mix, but this Silicon Valley city has long been home to Christmas in the Park. What started as one man's idea of bringing seasonal spirit to his community in the 1950s is now a major downtown event, with animated displays, and trees decorated by local schools and other organizations. Don't miss a drive through the Willow Glen neighborhood, where extravagant Christmas decorations line the streets.

DESTINATION OF THE YEAR

FOUR FRESH WAYS TO LEAN IN TO WINTER

TRAVELERS HAVE finally warmed up to winter-centric wilderness itineraries. Take Denali National Park & Preserve, which has seen such an increase in demand that it will implement new measures this season: plowing an additional 12 miles of roads; grooming more trails; and installing a footbridge near Mountain Vista, the rest area known for its views of the 20,310-foot peak, to improve access to cross-country-skiing and snowshoeing routes. And with AAA forecasting continued demand for outdoorsy and socially distanced vacations into 2021, here are four ways to capitalize on cold-weather pursuits. BY RACHEL CHANG

Getting into the "snuggle" flow in France.

Rest and Recharge

New York's Finger Lakes aren't typically top of mind this time of year, but the Inns of Aurora (inns-of-aurora.com; doubles from $200) is set to open spa in early 2021, with hydrotherapy circuits, pools, and winter-themed activities, like tea-blending classes. Outside Montreal, the resort Spa Eastman (spa-eastman.com; $169 per person per night, all-inclusive) soars to life in winter, with treatments in the Finnish sauna, hammam, and outdoor whirlpools. Meanwhile, some innovators have started "snowg" classes that combine yoga and a wintry outdoor setting. "Practicing in these mountain landscapes connects us to the elements and to spaciousness within," says instructor Rebecca Black (rebeccablack.com), a snowboarder who's pioneering the practice with retreats in the Tarentaise Valley of the French Alps.

Chase the Night Lights

The northern lights are on view in Alaska through April 21, according to Don Hampton of the Geophysical Institute at the University of Alaska Fairbanks. "You need clear, dark skies since the aurora borealis is a very high-altitude phenomenon—view," he says. (It's also smart to avoid weeks closest to the full moon, whose brightness can spoil the show.) Fairbanks is a hub for aurora tourism, and operators including A Taste of Alaska Lodge (atasteofalaska.com; doubles from $195), Borealis Basecamp (borealisbasecamp.net; doubles from $389), and Northern Alaska Tour Co. (northernalaska.com; overnight tours from $559 per person), are running trips with COVID-19 precautions in place. Travelers can also spot the lights in central Canada and Scandinavia.

Stomp Through the Snow

State parks in South Dakota are out to sell travelers on snowshoeing this winter. Rangers at Guster and Good Earth (gustergoodearth.com), among others, will set visitors up with free rentals for hikes through snowy terrain. Many high-end resorts offer guests free snowshoes, including the Lodge & Spa at Brush Creek Ranch (brushcreekranch.com; $950 per person per night, all-inclusive), in Wyoming, and Rabbit Hill Inn (rabbithillinn.com; doubles from $209), in Vermont. Also in Vermont, the Trapp Family Lodge (trappfamily.com; doubles from $200), in Stowe, is a great spot for cross-country skiing, with nearly 100 miles of groomed and backcountry trails. Those who prefer to power through powder miles of snowmobiling trails in Wyoming, Brooks Lake Lodge & Spa (brookslake.com; $477 per person per night, all-inclusive), near Yellowstone National Park, can get new riders up to speed.

Go All Out for Christmas

Germany is where many holiday traditions originated, and the country still holds the crown for the world's most festive Christmas markets. They don't get more storybook than the one held from late November to early January in the Bavarian town of Rothenburg ob der Tauber (rothenburg-tourismus.de). Visitors can try Bavarian snacks, sweets, and mulled wine while shopping gifts and ornaments. Stateside, the town of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, earns the nickname of "Christmas city" with its Christkindelmarkt (christkindelmarkt.org). It mimics European counterparts with more than 150 booths, plus live holiday music (and, this year, extra health and safety measures). In San José, California, the long-running Christmas in the Park (christmasinthepark.com) festival will be drive-through-only this year—but the light sculptures and holiday displays will be bigger than ever.

Christmas in the park brings the community together and lets us see a little bit of the beauty happening all around us in the city. It is fun to watch all the different performers and think about all the groups doing great things out there that decorate the trees.
