Thank you again for attending our annual conference in March. There were some new, and, at times, confusing moments during the weekend, but we all figured it out and had a great time in the process. Thank you so much for taking the time to complete the survey! Your responses have been very helpful as the MAAF board works towards planning the 2023 MAAF conference.

Speaking of the conference, here are some interesting facts about our time together in Portland. There were 185 rooms reserved - all of our fairs were together under one roof! 420 dinners were served, hot and delicious, by servers who entered the banquet room from 5 different vantage points. 52 auction items plus our 50/50 raffle (thanks to Katie, Mark, Kathy and Mel) raised $5,079.75 for the MAAF Foundation. The Marketplace welcomed in 7 new associate members to join with 27 returning associate members! The associate member traveling the farthest to attend our conference was Freddie Prez from California, and the fair members traveling the farthest were Lynwood and Jessica Winslow joining us from Presque Isle. 25 fairs were represented along with one non-Maine fair (Massachusetts).

We offered six informational meetings and six meetings for affiliate groups. Six of our corporate sponsors from previous conferences stepped up again to help and were joined by one new sponsor. Joining us this year were two amazing Maine food trucks! When you see Pinky D’s and Fat Guys at your local fair this summer, make sure to stop in and thank them for coming out in the rain and snow to serve up some delicious “Fair Food.”

The sports wagering legislation is headed to the Governor’s desk as you read this, and we are hopeful that it will be signed into law. The funds generated from this bill will greatly assist MAAF in making our future conferences even better.

A reminder that you should have sent to Missy Jordan your fair dates for the three upcoming years. This is important business and needs to be done ASAP!

You may have heard that there are two fairs who have decided to withdraw from the fair list. Maine Farm Days has left due to an increasing business load and family commitments, while Bangor State Fair has decided not to have an agricultural component in their event. Please support the 4-H Youth from Penobscot County as they are currently using last year's venue. More in the next newsletter.
I look forward to seeing you this summer at the fairs, and encourage you to participate in our MAAF 2022 Fair Challenge, “Create an Experience: Maine Grows!”

Thank you Pinky D's!

Thank you Fat Guys!

MAAF BOARD MEMBER UPDATE

Shortly after our 2022 MAAF conference, newly installed President Mike Timmons notified the MAAF board that he would be stepping down as President. In the letter that he sent to the board, Mike mentioned “conflicts of interest” and “medical issues” as contributing to his decision.

G. David Byras, Jr., the former 1st VP, is serving as President. Following the MAAF by-laws, David became the MAAF President. The executive board members are: David as President, Garrett Lambert as 1st VP and Darcy Winslow will be filling the position of 2nd VP. We wish Mike all the best and thank him for the many years that he worked with MAAF.

FAIR PRESIDENTS MEETING
Over the past few years, the MAAF board has invited all fair presidents to attend the next monthly board meeting following the MAAF conference to review and reflect on the annual conference. This year, ten fairs joined the board at their April meeting - eight in person and two via Webex. The fairs were from all across the state and represented small, mid sized, and large Maine fairs.

The fair representatives shared their feelings about the 2022 conference as well as suggestions for the 2023 conference. Among the topics discussed were: rooms, meals - breakfast, banquet and food trucks, facility location and layout, speakers, parking, Ment-A-Minute, scheduling conflicts, and entertainment. There was strong support for coffee during the banquet.

MAAF thanks those fairs represented for their feedback, and the conference committee will work to address any concerns/suggestions that were brought forward.

Fair evaluators - there are five - are hard working, conscientious men and women who travel to all of our Maine fairs beginning in June and ending the first week in October. Each evaluator comes from a background of involvement in Maine fairs, and in some cases have served as a department superintendent for their home fair. Working with Missy Jordan, they meet prior to the fair season to review and revise the fair evaluation form. Discussions involve: clarification of specific areas that are listed in the form, the importance of meeting with fair officials during the evaluation visit, and notifying (if possible) each fair when the evaluator intends to be on the fairgrounds. This impartial feedback - both in person and in the comment sections - from this form and visit should help to inform and guide fairs as they plan their events.

Please note: Each fair evaluator should receive a fair schedule and other promotional materials from the fairs they are to evaluate. Receiving these materials prior to the visit helps the evaluator to be aware of special times, programs, etc that a fair might wish to be seen.

* This fair season Roger Hoffses, and his wife Gail, have retired after many years of evaluating our fairs. If you see them at your fair, please introduce yourself and thank them for their hard work helping all our fairs. To learn all about Roger and his years working with his home fair - Northern Maine Fair - as well as MAAF and fairs across the Maine, please read our feature article, “These Shoes Will Be Hard To Fill.”

The 2022 MDACF fair evaluators, and their home fairs, are: Rayma Ashby (Litchfield), Linda Baker (Topsham), Erik Fitch (Blue Hill), Bill Jones (Ossipee) and Junia Norris (Union).

Cumberland Fair 150th Schedule
"I like to work for the public and I like to work for the community." "Anyone who doesn’t do volunteer work is missing out. It’s an awful lot of fun and a way to give back to my community," ....and Roger Hoffses certainly has had his share of fun for close to 40 years at the Northern Maine Fair!

For many years, Roger has been a welcoming figure at the fair. His long time friend, Bill Smythe, recognizing what an asset Roger would be for the fair, invited him to become a board member. Since joining the NMF board, Roger has been involved in all aspects of the fair. His responsibilities have included, but were not limited to, superintendent of the grounds, midway, fireworks, 50/50 tickets, horse racing and so much more. During his time on the board, Roger entered as a board member, then later served as fair vice president and ultimately president of the Northern Maine Fair. He also was elected a member of the Maine Association of Agricultural Fairs.
More recently, Roger was known to travel from his winter home in Zephyrhills, Florida, to the winter MAAF annual conference where he could be found at the 50/50 ticket table with his longtime friends Mark and Katie Damren. Initially begun as an MAAF fundraiser, the 50/50 raffle became the cornerstone of the MAAF scholarship program. Roger was thrilled when his grandsons, Caleb and Jacob Buck were chosen as recipients in the early days of the scholarship program. After graduating from college, the Buck brothers partnered with Buck Farms, and in 2015 opened the doors of The Maine Malt House. Their highly successful business plan has been able to provide the unique flavors of the Aroostook growing region to local breweries and distilleries.

Roger has always been working to make the fair better...“I’m very excited about the fair. The fair does an awful lot for the city of Presque Isle and Aroostook County.” Working closely with his good friend, Ray Lamoreau, Roger spearheaded a campaign to raise money to build the fair’s Agricultural Heritage Building, which serves as a museum and educational center. Roger has shared his enthusiasm for, and commitment to, the fair community with his family. His daughter, Lauri, and husband, Bruce, served as leaders in the 4-H Baby Beef program for many years, and his four grandsons were involved at the fair in showing cattle. Sons, Scott and Karl, and daughter, Lisa, round out the Hoffses family, as well as eight grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

Roger and his wife, Gayle, were selected by the Maine Department of Agriculture to serve as Maine fair evaluators. Over the past several years they have traveled to most of Maine’s 25 agricultural fairs, and made many close friends along the way.

As the 2022 fair season is set to open, and the Northern Maine Fair puts the final touches on its preparations for this year, Lynwood Winslow, NMF President, reflected back on the many years of volunteer service that Roger Hoffses has given to the fair. “Roger Hoffses has an amazing passion for agricultural fairs, and especially for the Northern Maine Fair. He has dedicated a big part of his life to this passion and is well known across the state for it. His tireless work ethic and his vision for the organization has kept Northern Maine Fair going through some difficult years! Whether he is negotiating with a carnival provider, leading a major construction project, or repairing fences, Roger can usually be found somewhere on the fairgrounds. I am thankful for his decades of service that will help to preserve the Northern Maine Fair for years to come.”

BANGOR FAIR - NO MORE AGRICULTURE

This article ran in the Bangor Daily News on April 1, 2022 and is written by Julia Bayly.

When the Bangor State Fair returns this summer there will be some notable absences. Namely, the barns that normally house the livestock and 4H animal exhibits will be gone.

The land on which the fair takes place includes city-owned Bass Park. The barns and other buildings associated with the fair’s livestock exhibits are being torn down due to their age and condition, according to Tracy Willette, director of Bangor Parks and Recreation. The buildings were still standing as of Thursday.

“The city’s engineering department had an independent assessor come in to look at the condition of the barns,” Willette said. “They had fallen into some disrepair and the assessment came back that it would be a significant investment to make them safe and the ultimate decision was made to demolish the existing buildings.”

The Bangor State Fair, first held in 1849, is one of the country’s oldest state fairs. It’s unclear what removing the barns and other buildings mean for the 4H exhibits and other agriculture shows typically held there each year, or what effect losing those events would have on the event’s future status as a state fair.

Leaders of 4H animal programs in Penobscot County learned about a month ago that the fair was scrapping the livestock shows and exhibits, according to Sheila Norman, University of Maine Cooperative Extension 4H professional in Penobscot and Piscataquis counties.

“I was told in a conversation on the phone,” Norman said. “It means we will need to find new ways for the kids to show their learning and what they are doing in their projects.”

Norman said she was told of the decision by Anthony Vail, general manager of Cross Insurance Center, which hosts the annual fair.

Vail did not return requests for comment.

For now, the event remains a fair as it is in the final year of a three-year fair license, according to Jim Britt, spokesperson for the Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry.

The city is considering allowing the 4H participants to put up temporary structures for the duration of the fair, according to Willette.

“That could still happen,” Willette said.

A local 4H club leader said they have been told to get anything they own out of the barns. They have also been told to remove a club-owned building from the site.

It’s a blow after two years of pandemic-curtailed 4H activities, according to Corinna Caron, leader for the Penobscot County 4H Livestock Club.

Normally 4H participants show and sell their livestock at state fairs. When COVID-19 halted those activities in 2020 and 2021, Caron hosted events on her family’s Casa Cattle Co. farm in Corinna.

Caron said she and the other 4H participants were looking forward to things getting back to normal this year with the excitement and exposure that comes with showing at a state fair.

“The state fair is our Penobscot County showcase for the kids’ market animals like cattle, dairy, sheep, goats and horses,” Caron said. “Our farm has hosted an option for our kids to sell their animals and we invited buyers and all the players to hold the show and sale in our barn.”

Caron said the move also shows a disconnect between city officials and the state’s agricultural traditions.

“All of these 4H kids have a real passion,” Caron said. “Every kid who takes part can educate people on where food comes from and a few of those kids will take this passion and carry it on to raising that food.”

Families participating in the 4H programs learned of the cancellation of livestock exhibits well after they had purchased their animals for the year. Most get the animals in late summer or early fall and are now raising them.

Norman said the decision affects about 40 4H participants.

According to its website, the Bangor State Fair is “an agricultural and recreational gathering” and is licensed as an agricultural fair by the Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry. No specific information about the 2022 fair is included on the website.
