The Indiana State Fair offers Our Global Kitchen: Food, Nature Culture Organized by the American Museum of Natural History, New York

INDIANAPOLIS, IN – At the 2017 Indiana State Fair, the Wonderful World of Food is being celebrated and taking fairgoers on a journey throughout the Fairgrounds and around the globe. As part of this year's theme, the fair is offering a museum-quality exhibit, Our Global Kitchen: Food, Nature, Culture. Organized by the American Museum of Natural History, New York, the experience is unlike any other at the Fair. The classic Harvest Pavilion has transformed into a museum, taking all who enter back through time to experience the challenges humankind has faced with feeding the masses. When visiting the exhibit, fairgoers can visit an ancient market place, prepare a virtual meal, and learn where their food comes from.

Our Global Kitchen: Food, Nature, Culture, is free with fair admission. The exhibit is located in the Harvest Pavilion on Main Street and open daily from 9am to 9pm.
