New Mexico State Fair Queen's Reunion to Take Place Tomorrow, September 15, 2018

ALBUQUERQUE, NM – Over 30 former New Mexico State Fair Queens will reunite for a special luncheon tomorrow afternoon in the African American Performing Arts Center. Tomorrow is significant, in that the 2018 State Fair Queen will be announced and presented during the rodeo in the evening. The luncheon will begin at 12:00 p.m..

Former Queens from various years will be present to discuss a wide range of fair related topics, and help in welcoming the new Queen to her position. The group will also include the first ever New Mexico State Fair Queen, Wilma Vaughan Fulgham. Fulgham was born in 1931, and lived in Curry County for most of her childhood. She was crowned the first ever New Mexico State Fair Queen in 1950, and has been back to the fair almost every year since.

“We are honored to welcome this amazing group of women back to the New Mexico State Fair,” said General Manager Dan Mourning. “Their presence here represents years and years of continued success and sustainability for the fair and the state.
