RED RIVER VALLEY FAIR ASSOCIATION

Director of Agriculture

As the Director of Agriculture, you will create an Agriculture Education Center that offers our Fairgoers an exciting and educational experience. You will design the center with an effective layout while creating a strategic long-term plan for the building. Being the host of the Center while being a resource person and livestock attendant is something you should take to heart and enjoy. FFA and 4-H are clubs you have belonged to or are very familiar with. You will work with these groups and others in the community to increase their involvement with our events. The livestock department will also fall under your watch for which you will prepare the premium book, awards, entries, signs and take care of any other needs for this area.

The Big Iron Farm Show will have you assigning vendor booth spaces, preparing license agreements, coordinating mailings and receipt of all agreements, insurance certificates and payments. While working with the Big Iron Committee you will plan the show, meetings, updates and demonstrations. Big Iron is the largest farm show in the upper Midwest.

Every day you are using the knowledge you have and learning additional skills to care for animals, create curriculum and hands on activities. You will never be bored and even get paid to have fun!

To thrive in this position, you must be an advocate for local agriculture. You know how to care for livestock and clean a barn. You are comfortable working with the public and directing volunteers. You may have headed volunteers for an event. You grew up on or have spent time on a farm with livestock, growing crops, or gardening. You have created documents in Word and PowerPoint.

This is not like many jobs where you will sit behind a desk all day. You will work with a great group of people that collaborate on ideas and make the fun happen.
