

*Join us during the South Florida Fair's
Livestock Shows*

The Fair's youth livestock shows are where you will see the exhibitors in action.

Take time to come visit and witness this part of the overall process in raising and showing these animals.

You'll hear the judges' respective comments on each market animal as they are carefully analyzed and "placed" according to their overall project expectations.

Auction-related questions can likely be answered in this informative Market Auction Handbook, published on-line specifically for the South Florida Fair's event at southfloridafair.com/p/kubotaagripdex/2021-market-auction-handbook

It takes a Team

The South Florida Fair stands committed to extending learning and hands-on experiences to our youth exhibitors, many of whom go on to extend their career paths in agriculture.

And that's why you as an individual, business or organization are important to supporting and the overall success of the Market Animal Auction held on the first Saturday afternoon/evening of the Fair.

As a private, non-profit 501c3, your support could mean a tax deduction for you. As always, consult with your tax advisor.

It goes without saying that the Fair serves as the MarketPlace for these young exhibitors. While many of them will utilize their garnered funds for college, trade school and further education, many will re-invest for their market projects for the following year.

To that end, parents, project leaders and advisors spend countless hours encouraging, coaching and assisting the youth exhibitors.

The South Florida Fair couldn't be more proud of the youth livestock exhibitors at our annual event in January. The Market Animal Auction is the culmination of many weeks and months of hard work and dedication to raising quality steers, hogs and pullets for the food chain.

Through youth development and leadership programs like 4-H and FFA and other independent opportunities, lifelong skills become lifelong assets to these exhibitors in responsibility, animal health and care, sportsmanship, leadership, communication and financial practices.

Never before have lessons learned in interpersonal skills, record keeping, public speaking, networking and time management been more relevant than they are today.

From the call of the auctioneer, each animal is sold through the arena, going to the highest bidder.
