HISTORY OF THE ST. PAUL RODEO

The small farm community of St. Paul, Oregon with a population of 425 is located in the heart of the Willamette Valley, 20 miles from Salem, the State Capital, and 30 miles southwest of Portland. The area for 20 square miles around St. Paul is some of the most fertile irrigated farm land in the country. Farmers raise a great diversity of crops here including grasses, grains, nursery, hops, fruits and vegetables. It was in this setting in 1935 that eight local farmers and businessmen conceived the idea for the St. Paul Rodeo. These eight originators were Bill Smith, Ray Manegre, John McKillip, Carl Smith, Maurice Smith, Jim Gooding, Ralph Butts, and Ed Unger.

The City Park, a baseball diamond surrounded by scotch broom and littered with tin cans, was cleaned up and a pole fence built around a short quarter mile track. Four bucking chutes and a roping chute were added, and the locals went looking for stock for a rodeo to be held July 4, 1936.

Bill Smith was the first President of the fledgling organization and the ramrod in getting things going. He farmed with a great number of horses and from his herd came several of the bucking horses used the first few years. One of them, St. Paul Special, was used in the Christensen Bros. rodeo string for several years.

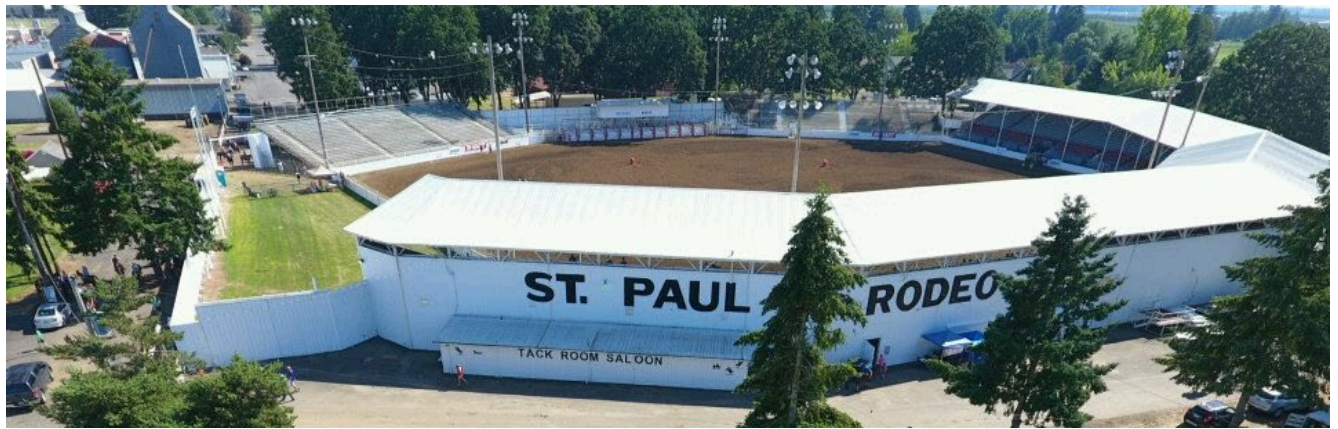

Pat Smith taking entries from Walt Mason, Shawn Davis and Wayne Vold in 1972.

Word was out! And that first year cowboys came from all over Oregon, 50 of them strong, to compete for a rip-roaring purse totaling $500. There were bareback and steer riding events and roping competitions using the new chutes. Saddle broncs were blind-folded and "snubbed" to a 2,000+ pound draft horse in the arena. The competitor's job was to saddle the bronc, mount, and ride. Local folks pitted their fastest teams and bravest drivers against each other in tumultuous hop buggy and chariot races. Trick riders and trick ropers provided additional colorful and exciting entertainment. Supplementary entertainment was available in the Park where numerous carnival food, beverage, and game vendors provided good times. There was an ever-popular gambling tent where poker, blackjack, and slot machines entertained adults who considered themselves lucky and figured they could "beat the odds". St. Paul was remote enough that this type overt activity went "unnoticed" by the authorities. Rumor has it that the local Mayor's wife was a regular patron of this tent and fully enjoyed her attempts to outsmart the machines! This diversity of wild and colorful entertainment provided just the diversion needed in a time when thoughts focused on the unknowns of a war abroad.

In 1937, the custom of having "royalty" represent and promote the rodeo became part of local tradition. Virginia Ernst was St. Paul's first queen; she served in 1937 & in 1938. Ray Manegre was elected president after the untimely death of Bill Smith in 1938: He lead in that capacity from 1939 until 1955. During his tenure, the rodeo grew up! In 1940, lights were added for night rodeos, and purses were increased. Growing crowds prompted construction of a new grandstand, bleachers and bucking chutes in 1945 which provided 6,000 covered seats and 3,000 bleacher seats. In 1956, we added another section of covered grandstand to bring us to our present total seating capacity of 10,500.

PRCA HISTORY LIVES IN ST. PAUL

The St. Paul Rodeo has hosted just about every World Champion Cowboy, the best specialty acts, announcers and stock. Christensen Brothers Rodeo stock was the foundation upon which the St. Paul Rodeo tradition of great livestock was built with so many great horses and bulls. Mr. Smith, later known as Smith and Velvet was named after long time St. Paul Rodeo Secretary Gene Smith. The famous Challenge of Champions with Lane Frost and Red Rock was featured at the 1987 St. Paul Rodeo where the series was tied up after Lane bucked off.

Having grown to a rodeo purse of more than $240,000 draws the top contestants to St. Paul as the 4th of July tradition in the Northwest continues.
