Agriculture Takes Center Stage at the 2026 Tennessee Valley Fair

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. – Agriculture has been at the heart of the Tennessee Valley Fair for more than a century, and the 2026 Fair will continue that tradition with ten days of educational exhibits, livestock competitions and interactive activities celebrating East Tennessee's agricultural roots.

Returning September 11–20 to Chilhowee Park & Exposition Center, the Tennessee Valley Fair offers visitors an opportunity to discover the importance of agriculture in everyday life through engaging experiences for the entire family.

Ag Alley will once again serve as a hub for agricultural education, featuring interactive displays and activities designed to connect fairgoers with the people, animals and industries that help feed and sustain our communities.

Visitors can also enjoy the Mobile Dairy Classroom, explore the Little Ponderosa Zoo and participate in agricultural activities throughout the grounds. The Fair's Every Day Ag signage will highlight the many ways agriculture plays a role in daily life, while Pick Tennessee Products will showcase the importance of supporting Tennessee agriculture.

The Fair will also feature daily 4-H Biscuit Making activities, offering an entertaining and educational opportunity to learn a traditional kitchen skill.

Livestock competitions will give exhibitors an opportunity to showcase their hard work while introducing fairgoers to a variety of animals and agricultural traditions.

Through programs such as Down on the Farm, the Fair also provides valuable agricultural learning experiences for elementary school students.

The Tennessee Valley Fair remains committed to educating future generations about agriculture while celebrating the farmers, exhibitors and families who make East Tennessee's agricultural community strong.
