Seattle, Wash. (February 24, 2016) – The World Trade Center Seattle (WTCSE) is pleased to announce the appointment of Jean Thompson, owner and CEO of Seattle Chocolates Company, to its board of governors. Thompson will join existing board members to foster new and continued opportunities among business leaders throughout the Pacific Northwest.

“World Trade Center Seattle is a powerful network of industry leaders whose insights and ideas stimulate economic growth in our area,” said Thompson. “I’m thrilled to be part of the board and help develop creative opportunities that will continue that growth and make Seattle thrive.”

Thompson is known as a business and marketing leader in the Northwest, transforming the way consumers think about chocolate. By expanding the audience for chocolate from just a special occasion item to more of an everyday indulgence, Seattle Chocolates Company has seen tremendous success since she took the helm in 2002, tripling in size and producing millions of chocolate bars and truffles each year. Prior to taking over the company, Thompson worked at Microsoft and Gupta Technologies in various marketing and communications management roles.

Thompson joins WTCSE as the organization experiences a substantial boost in membership and participation. In 2015, WTCSE increased its membership by 24 percent and grew the board of governors to 39 members, representing various industries throughout the Pacific Northwest such as commerce, travel, health and technology.

“Jean is a dynamic addition to our growing board,” said Shelley Tomberg, director of World Trade Center Seattle. “As Seattle continues to solidify its position as a global marketplace for business, ideas and technology, World Trade Center Seattle is even more vital to our local business leaders, allowing them to develop genuine and strong alliances. We look forward to Jean’s contributions to the board as she is truly a business leader influencing the future of Seattle.”

For those interested in meeting Jean and learning from her entrepreneurial journey, she will be featured in a fireside chat on March 29. “What Happiness Tastes Like: A Fireside Chat with Entrepreneurs Jean Thompson and Stacy Lill” will begin with a tasting of Seattle Chocolates and O Wine, as well as a brief program and Q&A.
